Course Overview:

Male or Female? Gay or straight? Single or Married? It appears to be human nature to categorize people under specific labels so we know how to interact with them. Nothing influences our social interactions more than gender. The sex of babies is often known before birth, one of two genders is assigned, and for the rest of one’s life, social opportunities, interactions and expectations are influenced by our chromosomal make-up and the labels assigned to us, such as masculine or feminine. During the semester, and through a sociological lens, we will discuss historical and contemporary issues surrounding gender and sexuality, we will engage with peer-reviewed research and pop culture and critically analyze the relationship between gender and sexuality and the media, politics, schools, corporations, the home and family, and other institutions.

This course has both the Social & Behavioral Sciences (BF) & Diversity (DV) designations. BF courses “help students understand institutions, cultures, and behaviors...[to] acquaint students with fundamental concepts, theories, and methods of analysis used in the social and behavioral sciences [and] enable students to think critically about human behavior and society.” DV courses are, “designed to explore the national society – its norms, laws, public policies and discourse – in the context of the rich and varied cultural diversity which has shaped it [in order] to extend cross-cultural understanding, perhaps replacing the impulse to stereotype, with better informed reasoning, understanding, and judgment skills.” An aim of the course is thus to encourage the use & exploration of multiple perspectives & open possibilities for meaningful communication across social boundaries.
Research is at the heart of sociology and the center of this course. Engaging in the research process ourselves will help us to understand the limits & validity of our hypotheses about gender and sexuality, and the biases and limitations, as well as the insights, of scientific research. In readings, lectures, discussions & in-class exercises we will focus on theories and research from sociology and other social sciences in order to build a well-rounded picture of what constitutes gender, gender difference, and sources of gender inequality. We will also consider how gender is implicated in cultural definitions of family, work, caring, violence, sexuality, and physical attractiveness.

Course Objectives:

Specific goals for students in this course are the following:
- You will learn how sociologists study & conceptualize gender.
- You will learn how to “see” the effects of gender in society.
- You will develop awareness of diverse gender and sexuality practices and belief systems that hold sway across social and cultural groups, and their implications for health, wellbeing & gender relations.
- You will become a critical reader of research methods & findings in popular & scholarly studies of gender & sexuality.

Course Readings:

The required textbook for this course is:
- The Gendered Society (5e), by Michael S Kimmel
  [available at the Campus bookstore, online and elsewhere]

Other required readings are available on the course webpage on Canvas. You can access Canvas from the "My Classes" tab on the Campus Information System (CIS), or at https://utah.instructure.com. Questions related to Canvas should be directed toward the TACC helpdesk (tacchelpdesk@utah.edu; 801-585-5959).

In order to successfully understand the material, actively engage in course discussions and earn a good grade in the class, it is imperative that you read all of the required texts and watch all required media before the week the material will be discussed.

Class Participation Guidelines:

This is an online course. Our online class meetings will include a mix of recorded lectures, group discussions, quizzes, and multimedia (film/ted talks/music). The following list is the expectations I have for you as a student:
- Be an active, respectful & collaborative listener, discussant & participant.
Complete the assigned readings before the class. To ensure you are grasping the information presented, you will be quizzed regarding the readings before the lecture is unlocked and there are no make-up options.

Complete the required assignments on time. I will not accept late assignments and any need for an alternative test-day must be determined with me before the test.

Follow the University of Utah code for student conduct. You are expected to maintain professional behavior in the [online] classroom setting, according to the Student Code in the Student Handbook. Students have specific rights in the classroom as detailed in Article III of the code. The Code also specifies proscribed conduct (Article XI) that involves cheating on tests, plagiarism, and/or collusion, as well as fraud, theft, etc. You should read the Code carefully and know you are responsible for adhering to it.

As your instructor, it is my responsibility to provide a productive learning space, give constructive feedback regarding your course performance, and make all announcements regarding the syllabus, readings and assignments in a timely manner.

Course Requirements:

Your final grade in the course will be based on your performance on the following 4 requirements:

1. Weekly quizzes (25%)
2. Midterm exam, TBD (25%)
3. Critical analysis paper, TBD (25%)
4. Final exam, TBD (25%)

Weekly in-class quizzes (25%): Every week there will be one quiz. Quizzes will include, but are not limited to, questions about the readings. Questions might include true/false, multiple choice, or short answer. Quizzes allow me to ensure you are doing the required reading. Two of your lowest score quizzes will be dropped.

Midterm exam (25%) and Final exam (25%): The midterm and final exams will consist of a mix of true/false, multiple choice, and short essay questions. The exam questions will cover material from lectures, discussions, readings, and media shown in class. You will have a specific amount of time on testing days to complete the exam. There will be no make-up exams and any arrangements for an alternative test day must be made with me in advance.

Critical analysis paper (25%): The critical analysis paper allows for you to dive deeper into a topic that we discussed in class that you would like to know more about. You will write a paper that utilizes resources from class in addition to resources that you find on your own regarding the topic. Throughout the semester, I will cover specific paper requirements and expectations, in addition to mini-lectures regarding writing a research paper. You will participate in a peer-review process to become better writers and consumers of research. Your final paper will be 5-7, double-spaced, pages, with a minimum of 8 peer-reviewed references.
